Description	MedSoc holds weekly meetings for students who are considering careers in medicine and the health professions. Topics of discussion include recent medical news, medical innovations, topical diseases and the challenges of being a medical professional. Ethical issues that affect doctors and health care workers are discussed and debated, providing good practice for future university interviews. Sessions are student-led also involve learning about entry requirements and admissions criteria to various medical and health professional programs around the world, and the group has hosted guest speakers from UK and Australian medical schools as well as older students who have been through the application process. MedSoc is a great way for those who have similar aspirations to share knowledge and experiences which will increase their general knowledge of medical issues and benefit their preparation for university applications.
